He Now Invites You to Attend the Opening of One of the Most ## REMARKABLE CLEARANCE SALES of Seasonable Merchandise ever held in this city SALE STARTS TUESDAY, JANUARY 12th, AT 8:00 A. M.

AM "The Mysterious Stranger," I have a vital message for those of you men and women who want to make every dollar do double duty.

I am a hunter of bargains—not men. "Come," said the head of this firm "help us to put on a sale that will be the one hig startling sensation of the season. A sale so full of human interest that it will be the talk of the thrifty for days and weeks to come.

Take charge of our stock—hunt high and love—from top to basement—delve into boxes—under counters—into shelves—here—there—every-schere—unearth bargains—find goods that the people

Then slash—smash—slaughter the prices, forgetting the cost, we want to make this sale a record breaker-a price maker -so if cutting the heart out of prices will bring results, we will stand back of you, no matter what the cost may be.

$12.50 and $15.00 Suit Prices Slashed To

It is impossible in this limited space to describe these splended saits. At $12.50 and $15.00 they are priced atmissally low for such sterling qualities. New tancy mixtures for men and young men.

ND I have taken them at their word. If you will read carefully this advertisement you will see what remarkable—what wonderful bargains I have discovered and how unmercifully I have cut the prices with never a thought

I have smashed prices as they have never been smashed before in this city. I will save you more good American dollars than you ever believed possible.

Come and see how far you can stretch the purchasing price of a dollar. Every article in this big stock has been reduced. It would take many pages to list the hundreds of money-saving opportunities that await you here.

> Our display windows are filled with desirable goods all marked in plain figures, the counters and shelves are fined with them. Come early to the slaughter, examine the goods, compare the prices with those of other stores and when you have figured the savings on your purchases, you will be thankful that I came bargain-bunting for you and the good people of this community.

· Yours for dollar-saving,

CHAPTER V.

Back to Life.

The two days between Preme and Rungoon were distinctly memorable for the subtle changes wrought in the man and woman. Those graces of mind and manner which had once been the man's began to find expression Physically, his voice became soft and mellow; his hands became full of emphasis; his body grew less and less clamsy, more and more leonine. The blunt speech, the tritability in argument, the stupid pauses, the painful study of cunning phrases, the suspi-cion and reticence that figuratively encrust the hearts of shy and longly menthese vanished under her warm if care

If the crust of barbariam is thick that of civilization is thin enough. As Warrington went forward Elen stouned and gradually went back, not far, but far enough to cause her to throw down the bars of reserve, to cease to guard her impulses against the levesion of Interest and Inscination. She faced the truth squarely. The man fascinated her. He was like a portrait with following eyes. She spoke familiarly of her affairs (always omitting Arthur); she talked of her travels, of the fa-mous people she had met, of the wonerful pageants she had wilnessed. It was not her fault that, with the ex-ception of Martin, who didn't count, they two were the only passengers. Somehow or other he had always been this condition of affairs was directly able to meet the interest, though, often chargeable to fate; and before the boat reached Rangoon. Elsa was calle willing to let fate shift and set the scenes how it would. The phase that escaped her entirely was this, that had he not progressed she would have retained her old poise, And he proposed to make the most the old poise of which she was never of it. Now his mind was as clear of again to be mistress. It is the old evil as a forest spring. He simply tale—sympathy to lift up another first wanted to play; wanted to give rein steps down. She wondered if there had been a woman in his life ton, pointing to the characters and it she had been the cause of his downfall. Every day of the past ten years lay open for her to admire or condemn, but beyond these ten years there was a Chinese wall, over which she might not look. now fell upon his heart. She was as unattuinable as the north star; and nothing, time nor circumstance, could bridge that Inculculable distance. His heart burt him. He must see her no more after the morrow. Enchantment and happiness were two words which fate had ruthlessly scratched from his book of days.

Mr. Hooghly had already started off toward the town, the kit bag and the valise slung across his shoulders, the parrot cage bobbing at his side. Ho knew where to go; an obscure lodging for men in the heart of the business section, known in jest by the derelicts as the Stranded.

Warrington, becoming suddenly aware that his pose, if prolonged, would become ridiculous, but on his helmet and proceeded to the Bank of Burma. Today was Wednesday; Thursday week he would sall for Singapore and close the chapter. Before banking hours were over his financial affairs were put in order, and he walked forth with two letters of credit and enough banknotes and gold to carry him around the world if he so planned Next he risited a pawnshop and laid down a dozen mutilated tickets, receiving in return a hand-some watch, emerald cun buttons, some stickplus, some pearls and a beautiful old ruby ring, a gift of the young maharajah of Udalpur. The an-clent Chinaman smiled. This was a rare occasion. Men generally went out of his dark and dingy shop and nevermore returned.

"Much money, Can do now?" affably. "Can de," replied Warrington, slipable to meet the interest, though forced to go without tobacen for weeks.

There is a velu of superstition in all of us, deny it how we will. Warrington was as cortain of the fact as he was of the rising and the setting of the sen, that if he lost these heirdoms he never could go back to the old, familiar world, the world in which he had moved and lived and known happiness. Nover again would be nort with them. A hundred thousand dol-lars, almost; with his simple wants, he was now a rich man.

"Buy Hug?" asked the Chinaman. He rolled a mandarin's ring carolessly across the showcase. "Gold; all heavy; vally old, velly good ling." "What does it say?" asked Warring-

"Good luck and plospelity; yelly good Bigns."

It was an unusually beautiful ring, unusual in that it had no setting of jade. Warrington offered three sovand put the ring away. Warrington his head. He was strong. And Warringhither and thither along the scarps and ton departed, woodering if she would hastions of the barrier, but never accept such a token.

By four o'clock he arrived at the Chinese tailors in the Suley Pageda road. He ordered a sult of pongee, to be done at noon the following day. He added to this orders for four other suits, to be finished within a week. Then he went to the shoomaker, to the batter, to the haberdasher. the smile returned to her face, and her body bent in a kind of kotow. He was so big, and his beard glistened like the gold leaf on the Shwe Dagon pagoda. She understood. The white to the white and the brown to the brown; it was the law.

Warrington wont up to his room. He was welcomed by a screech from the parrot and a digulfied salaam from James, who was trimming the wick of the oil lamp. For the last year and a half this room had served as head quarters. Many a financial puzzlo had been pleced together within those dull, der in my heart. Newell Craig, and er, to have made a hash of his life drab walls; many a dream had gone up to the ceiling, only to sink and dissipate like smoke. There were no pic-teres on the walls, no photographs. In one corner, on the floor, was a stack of dispidated books. These were mostly old novels and tomes dealing with geological and mathematical mat-ters; laughter and tears and adven-ture, sandwiched in between the dry positiveness of straight lines, and squares and circles and numerals without end; D'Artagnan hobbobbing with Enclid! The disparity in weight and height was sollicient to rouse Warrington's sense of fair play. Besides, he was in a rough mood him-
